

	One 3 hour session per week/combined lectures and active learning
	In-class lectures, discussions, group activities and assignments/submissions based on course readings and independent research
	Participation and collaborative engagement (10%) Creative research assignments and responses (40%) Independent research project (25%) Final exam (25%)

This course provides students with a comprehensive overview of the geography – or geographies – of Canada. Throughout the semester, we will examine many of the regions and subregions that make up Canada and consider what connects and distinguishes them. We will also learn to identify core concepts in geography and develop a close understanding of how these can be applied to the study of the country at large. These include concepts from historical geography, political geography, cultural geography, urban geography, economic geography, and physical geography, all of which will be used to examine the intricacies